Much of this was represented by large tracts of land in various sections of the country, particularly in Tennessee, West Virginia and Texas.

The latest was an outgrowth of his arrest yesterday, in Pittsburg, on a charge of forging the names of Meyers, on a charge of forging bonds of the Construction Company.

ADMIRAL COGHLAN DIES OF APOPLEXY.

End Comes Unexpectedly at New Rochelle, N. Y.

Almost Constantly in Service for Forty-three Years.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Just on the eve of his removal to his new home, where he had hoped to spend his declining years in quiet after a lifetime of arduous service in the navy, Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan, retired, died suddenly here this morning. His death was entirely unexpected.

REAR ADMIRAL COGHLAN.

Although his health had not been of the best for many months, Admiral Coghlan's condition was not regarded at any time as serious. Early today, however, there came a sudden change for the worse, and, although physicians were promptly summoned and did everything they could, he sank rapidly until death came. While Rear Admiral Coghlan was awaiting the completion of his new home he, with Mrs. Coghlan, had been living at the home of Charles Chamberlain, at "Sutton Manor" and it was there that the admiral was stricken and died.

Apoplexy was the cause of Admiral Coghlan's death. Only a short time before he expired he complained of severe pains in the region of the heart, and when a physician reached the house he had collapsed. Mrs. Coghlan was at his bedside when death occurred, but the admiral's son is in California.

Rear Admiral Coghlan was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1862, and from that time until his retirement, in December, 1906, he was almost constantly in the service. He participated in the Battle of Manila Bay during the Spanish war, in command of cruiser Raleigh, and was advanced six numbers in rank of conspicuous conduct in that fight. He had in turn, been commandant of the Mare Island navy yard, League Island navy yard, Puget Sound naval station, Naval War College and the New York navy yard. Admiral Coghlan was a native of Frankfort, Ky., and was 61 years old.

FEARLESS, YET KINDLY.

Admiral Coghlan Had Hosts of Friends, in and Out of Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Sincere regret was expressed on every hand today, when the news of the death of Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan became known. Fearless, kindly and a good story-teller, he had hosts of warm friends, among both officers and those outside the service. Admiral Dewey expressed himself as shocked at the news. Coghlan was with Dewey at the Battle of Manila Bay, in command of cruiser Raleigh, and was promoted later for his work in that battle. He enjoyed the admiral's confidence to a marked degree, and was dispatched by him on various important missions while the fleet was in the Philippines.

It was Admiral Coghlan's popularity and capacity as a good story-teller that involved him in the incident, of which much was made at the time, when the admiral replied the postal "Hoch der Kaiser" which somewhat ruffled the German authorities. The incident occurred at a dinner which the admiral attended, and it was not intended that the text of the replies should become public. However, it appeared in newspapers, and as it occurred after the return from Manila, where the fleet had been visited by officers of the German warships, the affair was treated with more seriousness than perhaps it otherwise would have warranted. The Navy Department called on the admiral for an explanation. The admiral replied that it was regretted if it was treated by him to mean that the German emperor had with this expression of opinion, anything to do.

Admiral Coghlan had been a Kentucky in 1861, in the course of his distinguished career. He had served in the Spanish-American war, in the Spanish war, in the North Atlantic squadron, on board battleships Brooklyn and Olympia from June 1898, to April 1904, and more recently was commander of the New York navy yard.

BAYONNE, N. J., Dec. 5.—A 55,000 gallon oil tank of the Standard Oil Company near this town exploded with a terrific roar today, and then took fire. People were temporarily panic-stricken. Police and fire reserves were sent to the scene, and the flames were soon under control.

GENERAL SIMON RECEIVES OVATION.

Given Salute of Chief Executive of Republic.

Revolutionary Army, 8,000 Strong, in Port au Prince.

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, Dec. 5.—The revolutionary army, 8,000 men strong, marched into Port au Prince at 8 o'clock this morning. General Antoine Simon was at its head, and he was given an ovation by the people of the city. The entrance of the soldiers was orderly, and discipline is being maintained.

General Simon was received at the outskirts of the city by a delegation from the committee of public safety. The welcome of the people was officially conveyed to him, and he was offered a magnificent crown of palms. Accompanied by his personal escort, and followed by a large crowd, crying "Long live the president!" General Simon made his way to the cathedral, where he assisted at the celebration of a Te Deum. The service was conducted by the archbishop.

Upon emerging from the cathedral the ovation in honor of the successful revolutionary leader was redoubled. The bells of the city rang out and the drums and trumpets sounded the salute which is used only to welcome the chief executive of the Haytian republic. After leaving the church General Simon made a tour of Port au Prince, still accompanied by his escort and still cheered by the people. The popular belief was that he would go directly to the national palace and establish himself there, but he finally halted at a private house on the Champ de Mars, where he established his headquarters.

General Simon's position undoubtedly is very strong, and there is great likelihood of his proclaiming himself president of the republic. If he takes such a step there is reason to believe that General Leconte, at Cape Haytien, General Firmin, at Gonaives, and General Fonchard, at Jeremie, all aspirants to the presidency, will enter a vigorous protest, and that an outbreak of civil warfare will follow. The hope of peace rests in the holding of free elections, and it is believed General Simon recognizes the wisdom of such a policy. The rebel army has occupied the various barracks. The cavalry is commanded by a son of General Simon. The infantry is almost entirely armed with rifles, and is well supplied with ammunition; only a few detachments carry machetes.

Nord Alexis, the deposed president, accompanied by the members of his entourage left French cruiser Duguay Trouin today and transferred to German steamer Sarnia, which will take them to Kingston, Jamaica.

There has been a marked improvement in the rate of exchange since the Alexis government was thrown out, and the population is very jubilant over the amelioration.

WOMEN USE WHIPS.

Numberless Fierce Struggles at Suffrage Meeting in London.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—While David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer, was addressing a suffrage meeting at Albert Hall today the women interrupted him with shrill cries from all parts of the hall, until finally the uproar was such that the stewards moved down the aisles to quiet the demonstrants. They found them chained to their seats, and there were numberless fierce struggles the women using whips vigorously to repel the attempts to eject them, before anything like a semblance of order could be restored. Men and women struggled back and forth over the floor, the women rallying to the support of their colleagues, before it was possible for the chancellor to continue his speech.

RESULTS FAR REACHING.

Mexican Oil Flow Affects People and Animals Miles Away.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Fumes so strong that all metals in a town 65 miles away are turning black, buzzards, parrots and other birds are dying in great numbers, and the eyesight of many people far away is affected, are announced as among the remarkable results of the great flow of the Mexican oil well at Doslocas, Mexico.

Since the recent fierce conflagration there, which, as published at the time, consumed several million barrels of oil during its almost two months' continuance, the best engineering skill on both sides of the Mexico-United States boundary line has been engaged in the effort to control the flow and conserve the oil. Immense earthen reservoirs and dikes have been built, but the oil passed over these with ease and spread over the laguna for several miles. Men and animals, reports Consul Griffith at Tampico, are dying from the effects of the noxious gases constantly thrown off in great quantities by the wells. Tampico, 65 miles distant, is experiencing the blackening of metal from this cause, and all ships entering Tampico for Vera Cruz and passing near the well show the effects of the poisonous gases. Consul Griffiths says it has been authoritatively reported that two laborers with ten mules encountered a current of the deadly fumes at a distance from the well, and were killed.

HOLIDAY TRADE ACTIVE.

R. G. Dun Reports Bright Outlook for the Spring Business.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Dispatches to R. G. Dun & Co. indicate a seasonable response to the lower temperature in most sections of the country, while manufacturing plants are fairly busy and holiday trade is active. Boston reports that the dry goods market is the leading feature, and textile manufacturers are increasing activity. The outlook for spring business is excellent, and holiday retail trade is good as well.

Bank exchanges this week at all leading cities in the United States are $2,244,213,044—14.4 per cent. over the corresponding volume of exchanges a year ago, but only 3.1 per cent. less than in the same week of 1906, when trade was very active.

ALL INDICTMENTS NOLLED.

Standard Oil Prosecutions in Hancock County, Ohio, Ended.

FINDLAY, OHIO, Dec. 4.—Standard Oil Company prosecutions in this Hancock county came to a sudden termination today when, at the request of Prosecuting Attorney Dodd, all the indictments against the company were nolled. Judge Duncan made the entry. Prosecutor Dodd's action resulted from the fact that all the alleged illegal practices which he sought to correct have, it is declared, been eliminated, and, further, that suits against the Standard company are now being prosecuted by the Attorney General of the United States, the attorney general of Ohio and the federal courts of Missouri.

CHICAGO ELECTION A FARCE.

Grand Jury Says Repeaters Voted in Platoons with Judges' Connivance

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—The ballots of men long citizens of other cities, the ballots of temporary residents, the ballots of the insane and even of the dead were cast in the primary of city of last August in Chicago, "Repeaters" voted in platoons with the connivance of willfully unseeing judges and clerks of election, and fraud, rampant to an extent hitherto unknown to Chicago, rendered the resultant party nominations morally worthless.

These and other startling allegations were made today in the report of the special grand jury which, after several weeks of delving into charges growing out of Chicago's first primaries and returning 82 indictments—another two score or more of politicians and other persons adjourned.

The investigation, owing to physical limitations, merely scratched the surface of the situation, according to the report, and doubt is expressed that there has been an honest city or county election in Chicago in years. The findings of the transcendental body characterize the primary system as a disgrace to the city.

Voting machines are urgently advised as a step in a remedial direction, and a wider application of civil service is urged. It is stated that while the jury cannot affirm that no frauds were perpetrated by civil service employes, it is significant that the investigators found none such. On the other hand, the report remarks the fact that although the police were near every polling booth, the investigators received no aid from them in seeking to fasten responsibility for the conditions that prevailed.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING

This sounds sententious, and somewhat like the reading of a chapter in a deep ethical volume, but it is nothing of the sort. It is only the title of a fashionable society play, and as all know that strange sermons have been preached from plain moral texts, so this deftly constructed office of amusing comedy has really been built on a foundation which looks like an ancient proverb. "The Importance of Being Earnest" is a brilliant satire on high society, and is thoroughly steeped in philosophic thought, though paradoxical as it may sound, it is full of fun and comic situations. Yet it never descends to low comedy. It is practically impossible for any one to hear it without laughing, and laughing very often too. It met with great success in London in the nineties, and was played in New York in 1902; it was the last play ever seen on the historic boards of the old Boston Museum.

It is to be read before the Vinity Club by Professor Thomas Crosby of Brown University, a fellow-townsman and always welcome when he reads in Newport. It would not be fair to describe the plot; those who desire to know it and hear the brilliant repartee and conversation with which it brims ever should go to hear the reading. But it may be no harm to say that it deals with a mistake made by a literary nurse, who in a moment of flurry and excitement at a railway station deposits the baby in a small handbag "with handles" and places the manuscript of a novel, which she has just completed, in the perambulator, the complications which arise remain to be told.

This play was revived with great merriment at Professor Crosby's annual outing course this year at Churchill House, Providence, and it remains to be seen whether or not the managers of the Vinity Club have been correct in arranging for its presentation in Newport. It is not one of those problem plays which require deep thought, it is only meant to amuse and entertain, and it may, and probably will, be called a trifle inconsequential.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

Board Finds Total Number Ballots Cast in State 77,586.

Governor-Elect Pothier Receives Largest Vote Ever Given Republican Candidate.

A total of 77,586 ballots were cast at the general election in this state Tuesday, November 3, according to the findings of the State Returning Board at the completion of the official count yesterday afternoon. This total is far by 4,146 than the number of ballots cast at the Presidential election in 1904, when the aggregate was 74,440, including blank and defective votes, as the total ballots cast in 1906 by 8,705, the aggregate for that year being 67,001.

The official plurality for Taft and Sherman in the state is 16,236, the total vote for the Republican candidates being 43,822 and for the Democratic candidates 27,586.

Governor-elect Pothier carried the state by 7,276. His official vote was 38,076, as against 31,206 for Oliver Arnold, the Democratic candidate.

Congressman Capron was elected by a plurality of 8,710, his total vote in the Second district being 21,374, while his opponent, Thomas F. Cooney, received 12,624. This is the largest plurality ever accorded Mr. Capron, exceeding his margin of 8,524 in 1906, the first year he was elected.

The total vote of the minor parties for Presidential electors was as follows: Prohibition 1,016, Socialist 1,067, Socialist-Labor 183, Independence 1,107. There were 544 defective presidential ballots and 4,729 blanks.

The Prohibition vote for governor ran ahead of that for Presidential electors, the total being 1,235; that for the Socialist candidate for governor was 1,044, Socialist Labor 195, Independence 575, a figure less by 425 than the Independence vote for electors.

The Prohibition vote for governor was the largest cast since 1906, when the party polled 1,689 votes. The vote in 1904 reached 1,689. Last year the party polled but 841.

The Socialist vote for governor ran far ahead of all records in the possession of the Returning Board. In 1902 there was no Socialist candidate for governor; in 1904 the party polled 1,147 and last year 681. The increase this year is 449 on the vote for governor.

The Socialist-Labor vote went the other way, the total for governor being the smallest polled for any year. In 1902 the vote for governor was 1,253, but it has decreased steadily every year, being 299 a year ago.

The Republicans cast the largest vote for their candidate for governor in the party's history. The nearest approach to the total vote for Governor-elect Pothier was in 1904, when ex-Governor Utter received 43,821. Last year the Republican candidate polled 41,065.

The Democratic vote for governor was less than in 1906, 1904 or 1902. Last year Governor Higgins received 29,487 votes and the year before 27,197. In 1904 ex-Governor Garvin's total vote was 25,095.

The Returning Board declared the Republican state ticket elected by the following pluralities:

Governor—Aram J. Pothier, 38,076; Oliver Arnold, 31,206; plurality for Pothier, 7,276.

Lieutenant Governor—Arthur W. Dennis, 43,259; Adelard Archambault, 8,747; plurality for Dennis, 11,742.

Secretary of State—Charles P. Bennett, 43,321; Robert Grieve, 25,966; plurality for Bennett, 17,355.

Attorney General—William B. Greenough, 42,869; Thomas F. Corcoran, 26,342; plurality for Greenough, 16,527.

General Treasurer—Walter A. Read, 43,109; Tristam D. Babcock, 25,997; plurality for Read, 17,112.

The Board officially declared the Republican candidates for Presidential electors duly elected, as follows: Joseph B. Fletcher, H. Martin Brown, Robert W. Goelet and Edward E. Arnold. It also formally declared Congressman Capron elected from the Second district.

The work of the Board Friday afternoon comprised the official count of four wards in the city of Woonsocket, all that remained of the 162 election districts to complete the count in the whole state. Some interest was manifested in the vote for Governor-elect Pothier in his home city, the total vote in Woonsocket was 2,275. He largest by 121 given any candidate on the state ticket. He carried the city by 1,122 over his opponent, Mr. Arnold. His total vote was 208 more than the city gave Congressman Capron and 104 larger than that cast for any candidate on the General Assembly ticket there.

It took the board 21 days, sitting on an average of four hours a day, to complete the count of the state during the past few days the overwhelming Republican vote in most of the cities and towns counted kept members and watchers alike alert.

The Board adjourned until next Wednesday, when the official count of the special elections in Middletown, North Smithfield and East Greenwich will be counted.

A BIG JOB AT THE ENGINEERING WORKS.

The Newport Engineering Works have just completed plating steamer Squantum, from midships aft, with steel plates 5-16 of an inch thick, 5 feet wide and 8 feet long. The total length of plates put on, including keel, measures 172 feet. In addition to the steel plating 300 square feet of copper and 1,500 square feet were used to finish the hull with the Squantum. The work of the Newport Engineering Works was able to complete this job in record working time which was, in the opinion of the Squantum's officers, the finest work of this kind which has ever been done in Newport. It is thought that the Newport Engineering Works will be entrusted with further work of this kind, as it has proved itself capable of turning out satisfactory work.

The company is now at work on a new steel barge for the Narragansett Pier Transportation Company, which will be ready to be launched in the spring.

NEWPORT JOURNAL AND WEEKLY NEWS.

ROOSEVELT'S VIEWS JEERED.

Suffragists Denounce Conservatism Marking President's Letter.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. A statement of President Roosevelt's views on woman suffrage, in which he expressed a personal belief in the granting of the ballot to women, while he is lukewarm in support of it, was jeered at a meeting held in Berkeley Theatre here today, under the auspices of the National League for the Civic Education of Women. Secretary Root's sentiments were placed before the meeting, and he was quoted as being directly against the granting of the franchise to women. The organization is opposed to woman suffrage.

Edwin Allaire was the principal speaker and presented a letter from the President, which was interpreted in various ways by the auditors, and Dr. Allaire was often interrupted by suffragettes and by shouts of disapproval. A score or more of women present who were evident suffragists united in denunciation of the conservatism which marked the President's letter. They became so troublesome that policemen were asked to seek out the offenders. They were threatened with ejectment, and hardly had a disturbance been quelled when another would arise.

At the conclusion of the lecture, however, the suffragists withdrew to the sidewalk, where an indignation meeting was held. Mrs. Norman Wells, who said she had just come from England after spending three weeks in Holloway Jail for trying to break into the House of Commons, was one of the leaders of the outside meeting.

THE END OF YACHT CONSTITUTION.

[Providence Journal.]

While the America's Cup defender, Mayflower, is drifting about somewhere in the southern seas, a hopeless derelict, attention is called to the ultimate disposition of yet another of the costly craft which have been launched from time to time for the defense of the Mecca of yachting. The Constitution has been sold for junk and will be broken up. The Herreshoff defender was distinguished in the long series of cup racing candidates because of her failure to demonstrate improvement over her immediate predecessor.

From 1885, when New England with Burgess, permanently assumed the defense of the trophy in the Vanderbilt cup yachts, Burgess finally retiring before the all-conquering Herreshoff, down to 1903, when Sir Thomas Lipton came, no exception was available save for a trial horse, until the new Constitution succeeded to the old Columbia in the trials. Columbia vanquished Shamrock I. Each two years later, proved herself so much more dependable than the Constitution, which was built expressly to meet the new challenger, that she was again selected to race Shamrock II. For once the Bristol architect failed to outdo himself. There was, however, ample satisfaction in winning twice in one year.

RESULTS OF THE COUNT.

Only Two Changes Among the Councilmen-Elect.

List of Successful Candidates for Office With Their Votes.

The Board of Aldermen finished the count Friday afternoon, passed resolutions declaring the various officers elected, and the incident is closed. It was a pretty steady job, and from the time the board started at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning until the count was ended at 5:05 Friday afternoon it had few moments it could call its own, but the end came. Finally all were glad when the last vote was taken and the resolution was passed and a motion to adjourn was in order. During the sessions the board canvassed for 161 different candidates for the separate offices, and when the work was prepared it contained the names and the votes received by each of these candidates and the names of those elected, so that one can see it at a glance, nothing at a document.

When the board took a recess after completing the count at 1:45 Friday afternoon there remained only the report to be filed by Mr. Pitman in the Second ward, but another roll for a recount in the W. F. Adams in the Fourth was made. Both were made. In the Third ward the votes of T. T. Pitman and Dr. Sullivan only were counted. By the warden's count the figures had been Pitman 292, Sullivan 290; by the official count Pitman 292, Sullivan 306. By the recount Sullivan gained 1 and Pitman lost 1, so that the final figures were Sullivan 307, Pitman 291.

In the Fourth ward the four nearest to W. F. Adams were counted. By the official count Mr. Adams had gained 14 votes and was No. 14 on the list, only 2 behind the successful No. 12. The figures on the official count were: Reagan 246, Adams 244, T. E. Shea 240, M. J. Sullivan 239. The recount changed some things. Reagan gained 6, to 252, and is no longer No. 12, advancing to 12, Adams lost 2 and dropped to No. 15, being passed by T. E. Shea, who remained steady at 240. Sullivan lost 2 and dropped out of the neighborhood, to 230.

While there were some shifts in positions among the councilmen-elect there were but two changes as to men. In the First ward the tie for fifteenth place shown in the warden's count was broken, Mr. Fogarty moving up from fifteenth to tie for twelfth, giving no chance for the men who were tied. In the Third ward Dr. Sullivan, by receiving 16 additional votes, moved up from fourteenth to ninth place and displaced Mr. Pitman. The men now members of the Council, and Mr. Fogarty, who was elected in the First, is also an old member.

There were some slight changes in the figures of the officers who were voted on by the city at large, but no general result was affected. For mayor, Mr. Bliss in the recount gained 2 votes, Mr. Boyle remained the same, Mr. Clarke gained 15. For School Committee Dr. Darrah gained 105, Miss Hunter 98, Mrs. Marsh 12, Dr. Porter 2, and Mr. Sullivan 110.

For alderman Albro gained 15 and Bingham 10, Rogers lost 2, Shepley lost 8 and Dyer 24, Callahan gained 7 and Kauff 7; Mahoney lost 1, Milne 2 and Hulme 12; Cottrell lost 8, and Hale 7 and Mallet gained 1; Kelly gained 3 and Anthony 14, Cowles lost 6. The struggle for alderman from the Fifth was even and there were fewer changes than in other wards.

A PRETTY BLOUSE.

Some of the sheer embroideries made by the St. Gall manufacturers make dainty trimmings for high-class lingerie blouses. The embroidery is done on "hand looms" and has almost the individuality of French convent work and that done by the Aubusson needlewomen. This pretty waist is made entirely of strips of this fine "hand loom" needlework, showing a conventional figure on a sheer lattice ground, alternating with insertions of Normandy Valenciennes lace. The needlework and lace are put together with insertion or "scaling." The deep yoke of Valenciennes is edging to match the insertion is made by lapping row upon row of the lace up to the top of the high collar. An extra touch of elaboration is the butterfly inset of Venise, which helps to make this simple model rather intricate in effect.

THE ROAD OF LIFE.

[From Journal.]

Long is the road, and strange, and, oh, so full of change!
Now, straight and smooth, it reaches far away between fair fields and waving woods.
Now, boulder-strewn and difficult and steep, it turns to right or left or fades into mysterious gloom a step before.

Along this road earth's myriads pass. None backward turn;
But all, some swiftly, some with lagging feet, move on toward the unknown goal.

No one remembers where the path began; and no one knows where it shall end.
It may be in a desert dark and lone and full of fear, for aught the travelers know;
It may be at the open door of some fair, mirthful inn.

The wise ones question not of this. They go their way, making good cheer with jest and song and friendly aid.
Content are they to think that He who planned the course also ordained the goal.

FANCIES.

Talk is cheap, but it isn't as cheap as it used to be before the telephone was invented.—[Philadelphia Record.

"Not always," snapped a grouch. "For instance, what was the necessity of inventing the green hat?"—[Detroit Free Press.

"Why are you so disgusted, Dennis?"
"I just heard a worn man call another a liar. And the man that was called a liar said the other man would have to apologize or there would be a fight."
"And why should that make you look so sad?"
"The other man apologized."—[Chicago Record-Herald.

CHURCH UNITY NOT POSSIBLE

[New York Tribune.]

Despite all the well meant talk about it, actual church unity is probably impossible, and if possible would be of doubtful desirability. There are now among the principal denominations few if any essential differences of faith. There are rather differences of creed and of practice, organization and discipline. But these are inevitable and not altogether undesirable accompaniments of those differences of temperament and taste which are inseparable from human nature itself. That some prefer Episcopalian, some Presbyterian and some Congregational government is natural, and is no more to be quarrelled with or even deplored than that some men prefer to live in the city and some in the country.

Federation, however, is radically different from unity, even though it be federation. The differences between the constitutions of Massachusetts and Oklahoma are probably as great as those between the laws and polity of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches. Yet those two states, and 44 others, join with constitutions exactly alike, are all inseparably joined in a federal union. There is reason to believe that the various Christian churches might be similarly joined.

CAPTAIN WILLIAMSON BLAMED.

Commonwealth's Commander Held Responsible for Collision With the Yolunt.

United States Inspectors of Steam Vessels Whitney and Stewart announced yesterday that they held Captain George H. Williamson, master of steamer Commonwealth, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company's service, to be responsible for the collision with Norwalk steamer Yolunt September 26, which resulted in the sinking of the latter. The captain has been put on trial on the charge, and the decision of the inspectors is reserved.

The charge against the captain is that he exceeded the speed regulations for crossing Westport.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF REFORM.

Every time the Democratic party adopts a platform it declares for a low tariff or a tariff for revenue only, or something of that sort. Individual Democrats are as eager for protection as Republicans, there is no politics in private business.

In the present hearings Democrats have asked for duties on barytes, a cheaply produced mineral, and sea Egyptian cotton, which competes in a certain degree with the famous and expensive Sea Island cotton. Where the latter will grow it probably costs no more to produce it than it costs to produce short staple cotton on the uplands. The Egyptian cotton has a shorter staple than the Sea Island, and being cheaper is imported to some extent to take the place of the more expensive article. Under the circumstances, therefore, it is preposterous to talk about a protective duty for the Sea Island variety, but Southern Democrats are doing it.

Senator Morgan of Alabama was a low-tariff man, but he tried to obtain a duty on raw silk, which he thought could be produced in his state. Samuel J. Randall was a great Democratic leader, but he and 40 Democrats who followed him killed the Morrison tariff bill. Arthur Pue Gorman was a Democrat, but he made the Wilson tariff bill so protectionist that Cleveland would not sign it.

The position of a protectionist Democrat is a difficult one. Theoretically it is no more difficult than that of a free-trade Republican, but practically it is more difficult; there are more of the protectionist Democrats than of the free-trade Republicans, and as no one seriously talks about free trade there is practically little embarrassment for the Republicans. But when the Democratic party in all its official declarations pronounces for a low tariff, and individual Democrats clamor for all the protection they can obtain, the situation invites the attention of the cartoonists and the joke-smiths of the newspapers.

MUNICIPAL EXTRAVAGANCE.

Municipal taxation is becoming so heavy a burden in many cities that there is a widespread demand for municipal economy. It is unfortunate, however, that this demand comes largely only from the officials who understand most clearly the results of municipal extravagance and a few far-sighted citizens who are able to look ahead and perceive where the course is directed by all the city governments, and little attention is paid to the matter by the great body of citizens who appear to be interested only in the financial conditions and management of the community in which they live. This is unfortunate. Municipal government is the work of the people who pay and not the work of engineers with special methods and considerations in the works of strength of an administration and of a majority, when the majority knows nothing and cares nothing about what is essential, but only desired. They are for more school houses and more city parks and want to be in the vanguard. This is the kind of a cry which has called up large municipal debts and are adding and adding to the burden that imposed upon them.

For years our cities have been [illegible] to improve their public facilities and to increase the facilities of their inhabitants, and many of the improvements are absolutely essential to the health, comfort and welfare of the people. It is the extravagances which accompany the carrying out of these projects which are the cause of complaint. Taxpayers want their money's worth and want the work done at the lowest possible cost. They want the money spent for improvements to be spent to the best advantage. They want the work done by men who understand what they are about, men who are not experimenting at the expense of the taxpayers, men who are not using the opportunity to gain experience at the expense of others who are paying the bills. They want the work done by men who are not using the opportunity to make a name for themselves

"THE WOLF."

A Good Play, Well Acted, Witnessed by a Fair Sized Audience at Opera House.

A fair sized audience at the Opera House Friday evening saw an excellent performance of an interesting play, "The Wolf," written by Eugene Walter. It is a drama of the Canadian Hudson Bay Company and its scenes are laid in the forests near Wind and Hour Rivers. It tells a not unusual story, but tells it in an interesting manner. The characters are strongly drawn. The company is competent. Jules Jobinon, the hero, a young French Canadian, was capably acted by Seymour Dean. Andrew McTavish, the Scotch father, rock-bound in his ways, was made a living personage by George O. Nicholls. [illegible] McDonald, the engineer, who [illegible] "The Wolf" of the play, was in complete [illegible] as portrayed by Henry [illegible]. Baptiste Lefirand, the Indian [illegible] was well enacted by J. T. [illegible] who had the French accent [illegible] to perfection. Frank Dee, as [illegible] happy-go-lucky George [illegible] gave a pleasing comedy element to the play.

Miss Estelle, the only woman in [illegible] had a difficult role as Hilda [illegible] but gave satisfaction by her [illegible] of the difficult role. There [illegible] specially strong scene in [illegible] certainly that between Jules [illegible] Donald for the possession of Hilda.

One of the largest fleets of sailing vessels to be seen for many years sailed into Dutch Island harbor yesterday afternoon and evening for anchorage. The captains of the sailing craft report that their harbor refuges are crowded with vessels, which, however, did not materialize and this accounting must of the best for those various destinations. At one time yesterday afternoon there were counted 27 three masted and four-masted schooners, making a beautiful marine picture. Harbor Master King [illegible] this morning 125 sailing craft anchored in his district besides others that passed in in the bay.

THERE WAS NO FIRE.

Box 27 Struck by a Crossed Wire in Locating a Pole—Almost an Accident to Hose 5.

Box 27 was struck at 2.28 this afternoon and there was a general rush for the corner of Catherine street and Rhode Island avenue, where the box is located. The weather conditions were fine, the sun shone and the air was bracing so that a little hustling did not hurt. The roads were in good conditions and people felt like spending a little time at a fire, so they hustled.

Incidentally, the fire department hustled. Hose 5, first on the ever to be first, turned the corner of Bellevue avenue and Catherine street on a gallop and almost on one wheel, and the spectators thought it was going to topple over on two children who were on the sidewalks, but it did not. The horse of Hose 5 fell on the manhole covering, just as he was about to turn into Catherine street, but no damage was done other than the delay, and the rest went on.

It will be noticed that up to this time nothing has been said about the fire. There was no fire. The recall struck at 2:36.

The Illuminating Company's men were putting in a new pole at the location of the box, and when they put the box on the pole there was a crossed wire, which escaped notice until the alarm came in. Then it was noticed. There was no loss, thanks to the fact that the Fives' hose wagon did not topple over.

A BIG WINNER.

Miss Anna Sands Takes All Honors in Pomeranian Class at Exhibition in New York.

At the annual show in New York yesterday of the Toy Spaniel Club Miss Anna Sands won all the honors in the Pomeranian classes. Her representative won in the two winners' classes, and in the dog classes she sweet the boards with her recent importation, Pom Patch Tufnell, who, as Cobham Jack Spratt, was a big winner in England. His kennel mate, Pom Patch Lulu, a sweet little bitch, headed a grand collection of bitches, including some good blacks and browns.

SOLD FOR TAXES.

Hodgson Estate on Narragansett Avenue Put Up at Auction Despite a Protest.

There was a tax sale this noon at the City Hall when Auctioneer Burlingham offered up J. M. Hodgson, estate on Narragansett avenue for sale on account of unpaid taxes for 1906 1907 and 1908, amounting to $177.07 in all. The estate is bounded south on Narragansett avenue, east on land of W. K. Hazen, to other lands of Knutson and Dorlinski, and west on land of Hehl, and contains 5,005 square feet of land, a large house, a front and two smaller houses in the rear. There were about 27 present, some evidently looking for a bargain.

Before the auction Mr. A. Warren Spaulding protested against the sale taking place at that time. City Solicitor Burdick said Mr. Spaulding had no interest in the place. Mr. Spaulding then said he protested against the sale in the name of his wife.

The sale, however, went on.

Starting at $1,000 and going to $1,700 on the second bid, bids of $100 each soon brought the price to $2,100. Mr. Burlingham said he could have obtained $1,900 to $2,000 for the place at the time of the sale and that it should be worth at least the valuation of the assessors $2,200. However, from $2,100 the advances were only by $50 until $2,450 was reached, when things stopped. Mr. Parsonage, who has been bidding, dropped out at this point, though he said he had had offers of $3,000 for the place. It was knocked down to Abraham T. Anthony for $2,450, which is called cheap for any one who has occasion to use such a place.

THE CONSUMPTION FIGHT

An Institution Being Established Every Other Day in the United States.

Every other day sees a sanatorium, association, or dispensary for the treatment or prevention of tuberculosis established in this country, is a statement issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. During the months of September and October 16 associations, 10 sanatoria, and five dispensaries were started or provided for in the United States, making a record of achievement in anti-tuberculosis activity never before equalled in any country of the world. The stimulus for this wave of philanthropic endeavor has been derived largely from the recent International Congress on Tuberculosis.

From one end of the country to the other, men and women of all ranks and classes, are rising up to fight in the battle against tuberculosis. Including the recently formed societies, there are at the present time, 211 associations for the study and prevention of tuberculosis in the United States, with a total membership of over 20,000, all engaged in an active war on consumption. Never before in the history of the country has such an army been massed to fight against disease. And, with the present rate of increase sustained, it is estimated that the army will be doubled in size within a year. January 1, 1905, there were in the United States only 24 associations for the study and prevention of tuberculosis. By January 1, 1909, there will undoubtedly be 250 such associations, an increase of over 900 per cent. The states which lead in the number of associations are Massachusetts with 26, New Jersey with 22, New York with 19, Michigan with 16, and Pennsylvania with 14. Thirty-five of the 46 states have one or more associations.

These associations are all philanthropic in organization, and are composed of physicians and laymen, both men and women, who are anxious to see the number of deaths from tuberculosis reduced. That such organizations are instrumental in saving life, may be seen from the reduced death-rates in several states and cities. In Boston, the death-rate was reduced from 21.70 to 18.46 per 10,000, largely through the efforts of the local association. In New York, it is estimated that the campaign against tuberculosis has saved to the city annually at least 3,000 lives. In Chicago, a similar reduction in the number of deaths from tuberculosis has been affected.

At the head of the great campaign being carried on throughout the country, is the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, with President Roosevelt as one of its heads and with nearly 2,000 members in every state in the Union. Allied with the national body, are 27 state associations, who are fighting tuberculosis on their various states. And under these state organizations, or independent of them, there are nearly 200 associations in the principal cities of the country.

The increase in the number of sanatoria at the present time, is also particularly noteworthy, since the need for beds for tuberculous patients is evident in every state. There are, at the present time, 250 sanatoria and hospitals making special provision for tuberculous patients, and the entire bed capacity of all these institutions is but 15,000. When it is considered that there are in the United States, at least 450,000 people suffering from tuberculosis, 1-5 of which number ought to be in sanatoria or hospitals, the lack of proper bed capacity is very evident.

The dispensary movement, one of the later phases in the anti-tuberculosis campaign, is also receiving a great impetus. Four years ago, there were only 19 dispensaries in the United States; at the present time there are 125, and new ones are being established at the rate of one a week. These dispensaries are places to which anyone who thinks that he has consumption, or knows that he has the disease, may go and be examined and given proper advice and treatment free of charge, or for a very small sum. The expense in these institutions has been laid a regular and sanitary life on the part of the patient, and on his sleeping in the open air.

UNDER ONE COMMAND.

Orders Consolidating the Newport Naval Stations.

The following are the orders issued by Secretary Newberry for the consolidation of the Newport naval stations under one command, to be known as the United States Naval Station, Narragansett Bay, R. I.

General Order 80, December 3, 1908. Navy Department.

1.—The Naval War College, the Naval Training Station, the naval hospital, and the marine barracks on Coaster's Harbor Island, the Naval Torpedo Station on Goat Island, and the Naval Coaling Station at Bradford, R. I., are hereby consolidated into one command, to be known as the United States Naval Station, Narragansett Bay, R. I., and will be under the command of the commandant of the Second naval district, or, in his absence, the senior line officer of the navy on duty at this station.

2.—The Naval War College, Naval Training Station and the Naval Torpedo Station will continue to perform under the commandment of the stations the functions for which each was established.

3.—Rear Admiral John P. Merrell, U. S. N., commandant of the Second Naval District, is hereby, in addition to his present duties, assigned to duty as commandant of the Naval Station, Narragansett Bay, R. I.

4. The commandant of the Naval Training Station at Newport, R. I., the inspector of ordnance in charge of the Naval Torpedo Station, the medical officer in command of the naval hospital, the officer in charge of the naval coaling station at Bradford, R. I., will report for duty to the commandant of the Naval Station, Narragansett Bay, R. I.

5.—All regulations, orders, or circulars inconsistent with this order are revoked.

A NEW SHEAR PLOW.

Addition to Snow-Fighting Equipment of the Fall River Road of Great Practical Value.

The Newport & Fall River road has received a new shear plow for the local division, which now makes the snow-fighting equipment between Bare and Stone Bridge consistary and five shear plows. The new machine is the latest type of Warren plow, and with its wings will keep clear the space between the double tracks on Broadway, where there has been trouble heretofore, the snow ridging up between the two tracks cleared by the other plows. The new plow will also be of value on Spring street, which is a difficult place to handle at best, the rails being so near the sidewalk that the snow has been thrown on the latter, possibly just after it had been shoveled. In running down Spring street the plow may be made to carry the snow out into the middle of the street and spread it so that it will not be so much nuisance there, while in running north as little plowing will need to be done as possible.

The advantage of having capable equipment for the clearing of the tracks exceeds the advantage to the car company and its patrons, for in case of heavy storms the breaking out of paths through the streets is of great value to ordinary traffic, and in case of fire these paths are of untold value to the firemen. The possibility of eliminating the ridge between the tracks on Broadway will mean a great deal to the fire department, since it will give a much better path for apparatus to run in, and will save many opportunities for spills, because of trying to cross frozen banks in turning out of the cleared path before the apparatus can be swung sufficiently to meet the outer ridge at a safe angle.

BIGGER, BRIGHTER, JOLLIER THAN EVER!

There isn't a secret that Santa Claus knows that we haven't learned all about in our 40 odd years experience. The beautiful side of the toy business is this: no longer is money spent on toys thrown away. Modern toys are now a valuable aid to the education of any child, furnishing as they do wonderful lessons of the world's greatest inventions, industries and art, and adding as they must in developing any particular bent a child may have. And what is more they bring parents and children closer together than the old-fashioned toys—frequently we have heard a young mother say that she spent as much time playing with the toys given to her children as the children did. The toys were so fascinating and so much more interesting than anything she had ever owned when a youngster.

Electric and Mechanical Railroads have been recently added to toydom. Most of these outfits teach how to operate switches, how to shut off the power, how to shunt cars from one track to another. Grand Central stations and sub-stations are at different points along the road, with bridges, signal stations, tunnels, draw bridges and turntables. Extra locomotives and cars can be added. In fact a Complete Toy American Railway System. Mechanical toys, and hill climbers, Juvenile Automobiles, Stables, Garages, Coach Houses and complete Villages, and the Clay Modelling Outfits, that differ in many respects from those of previous years. This is an easily handled modelling paste, with which you can model all sorts of animals, reptiles and birds, combined in a set, which many not by any means in the juvenile class would appreciate.

A PLAGUE OF HORSES.

A Serious Affliction Disturbing the Comfort and Welfare of People in Nevada.

[Reno Evening Gazette.]

Who ever heard of a plague of horses? Such a thing seems so absurdly scarcely credible. Yet at the present time a very serious affliction of the kind is disturbing the comfort and welfare of people not in Nevada, and to some extent in neighboring states, the mischief being so alarming that appeals are being made to the government for help.

The situation is particularly bad in the so-called Toyabe forest, which embraces an area of about 160 miles square in Nye and Lander counties, Nevada. This is a reservation set aside somewhat ago as a national forest, and of course is under the administrative control of the forest service. Within its limits, as would appear, there are 15,000 or 20,000 wild horses. Least of no value whatever, which not only devour the herbage, but entice away many domestic horses that are good and useful.

The country is most admirably adapted for horse raising, and the people out there are anxious to develop the business; but it is practically out of the question to engage profitably in this sort of enterprise while the region is infested by numerous roving bands of equine outlaws. Every sort of expedient has been tried for destroying them, and at the present time ranchers are paying the Indians a dollar for every wild horse they can kill. Nevertheless, the animals are rather increasing in numbers than otherwise.

The gravity of the problem will be realized to some extent when it is understood that the natural increase of the number of horses mentioned would be from 5,000 to 6,000 a year. They are absolutely wild, and have to be hunted much in the same way as antelopes, being not less difficult to approach. To try to run them down, even with the fastest horses, has been found impracticable, the most experienced rough riders and marksmen having been validly employed in this kind of work.

The most successful method adopted thus far has been to drive bands of the animals into canons, and then to set traps for them with portable corrals. Such a trap consists of an inclosure solidly built of tall posts, from which wings of wire net, about eight feet high, are extended for miles. It is a simple matter under such circumstances to drive the wild horses into the corral, there to shoot them to death. They are so terrified by capture that often they kill themselves by dashing against the walls of the prison pen.

There would be no use in trying to capture the animals, instead of killing them because they are utterly worthless. They are scrubby little beasts, weighing from 500 to 800 pounds—a sort of mongrel breed, such as inevitably results from the propagation of horses under natural conditions without control by man. It is only when the horse is properly bred with the aid of artificial selection that it develops into the noble creature we so much admire, whether it be a trotter, the Percheron type for draft, or what not.

Accordingly, the problem has assumed a decidedly serious aspect. So long as the plague of wild horses continues, not only in that region can raise good ones. It is necessary, then, that the wild animals shall be destroyed. But how? That is the puzzle. Meanwhile despite all efforts to get rid of them, they are increasing faster than they are killed. Hence the appeal for help addressed to the government. It is a question of sending a small army of people into the horse ridden country and wiping out the animals, a task that might take several years to accomplish. The forest service may be utilized to undertake it; but as yet it feels reluctant.

One reason for its disinclination is that news of the wholesale destruction of wild horses in Nevada would be sure to stir up a great deal of disapproval in the East. Such disapproval might be due to misconception of the novel but it would be none the less likely to injure the forest service.

Half a dozen years ago Nevada made a law permitting anybody to kill the wild horses. Thus the animals were literally made outlaws. But, though a great many were destroyed, it was found necessary to repeal the law, because a few good horses which belonged to the inhabitants were indiscriminately and accidentally shot. Since then the mischief has been getting steadily worse, and today there seem to be just about as many wild horses as ever roaming the mountains and plains in that part of the country.

There is no question that it is a wonderful region for horse raising. Horses can run outdoors the year round. In the summer they range in herdes over the wooded mountains, and when winter comes they have only to go a few miles in order to find the snowy plains where there is plenty of pasture. They keep fat at all seasons.

One naturally asks: Where did the wild horses come from? The answer is that many of them doubtless represent the progeny of animals more or less recently strayed out of domestication, but apparently most of them have their ancestry in a feral state with a further back, possibly, indeed, to centuries. Their forebears were originally domesticated; but not only how long ago. Not only are they extremely wild, but they are very startling, and, it is said, can see a man miles away.

It was stated that they are absolutely worthless. Perhaps this might be qualified by saying that their hides go south from one dollar and a half to two and a half apiece. In San Francisco there is a market for the skins, which converted into leather, sell for a variety of purposes.

TARIFF REVISION.

Cannon Believes it Will Not Be Accomplished in a Hurry.

Notable Improvement—Old Landmark Removed—Southern Representation to be Reduced.

[Washington Correspondence of the NEWS.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—"Some time next summer"—these are the words uttered by Speaker Cannon on his return to Washington for the session of Congress. He was referring to the probable time when the revised tariff bill would be passed. Not long ago Republican Leader Payne also said that he thought this measure would hardly be passed before the middle of July. Expressions like these are generally understood to mean that Uncle Joe and his lieutenants in the House realize that it will require some months to dispose of this important piece of legislation. For nearly a month the ways and means committee has been having hearings on the tariff and all the testimony taken will be pored during the extra session in reaching conclusions as to the schedules that ought to be presented. The House managers have been accused in certain quarters of arranging to rush through a bill without proper consideration and strictly on high protective lines. Speaker Cannon's statements, however, indicate that the presiding officer of the House is prepared for a lengthy and exhaustive debate in the Senate, and neither he nor any other man knows when the next tariff law will go into effect. The speaker also makes the point that in revising the schedules of the Dingley law as the people demand the members of Congress who have their own fixed views about certain things had better make up their minds that they will have to grant concessions in order to construct a measure satisfactory to the country.

The spacious plaza in front of the new Union railroad station will doubtless be in tolerably smooth shape by the time Judge Taft is inaugurated President, but it will require several years to make it complete and attractive. When completed that will be one of the greatest improvements of Washington. Eventually there will be trees, fountains, flowers and symmetrical walks and driveways, and possibly in the dim future some statues may be erected thereon. All that part of the city is having millions of dollars spent on it by the government.

The old Pennsylvania railroad building has been removed. As is well known to older travelers, the old landmark was located at Sixth and B streets, down in the heart of the city, and was built on government ground, on what is called the mall. The company occupied it under a grant of Congress. Ten or more years ago the facilities there became inadequate; there was not half enough track space, and when there was a rush of people to Washington, such as we have at inauguration time, it was almost as difficult to get into the city as it was to get out of it. It was in this station that the crazy Guiteau fired the shot which caused the death some weeks later of President Garfield in 1881. For a number of years there was a table in the ladies' waiting room containing tourists of the tragedy, and a metal star in the tile floor marked the spot where the President executive stood when the bullet entered his body. In the future Washington guides will have to be depended upon to tell visitors where this awful tragedy occurred, for it is doubtful if anything will be erected on the site by the government to recall the sad story.

General J. Warren Keifer of Ohio has announced that he is going to put on the pressure again during the coming session to have the House take a vote on the proposition to have the Congressional representation in the south cut down because of the disfranchisement of the negroes in the land of Dixie. Representative Crumpacker of Indiana, who originally brought this question to the front, is reported to have abandoned it. President Roosevelt is against the scheme, and close friends of Judge Taft declare that he does not look with favor upon the plan in view of the fact that able Republicans on the federal bench have decided repeatedly that the states have the right to fix the qualifications for voters.

The big international exposition at Tokio having been postponed from here it Congress will not revoke the power given to the President to appoint high salaried officials to represent the United States at the Japanese capital. The commissioner general for that exposition is Francis B. Loomis of Ohio. When he was selected by President Roosevelt the understanding was that the exposition would be held as originally intended. As it will not take place until 1912 neither he nor the others drawing such fine pay will have anything to do for several years. Mr. Loomis was formerly a Washington newspaper correspondent. He got a consular appointment in France under the Harrison administration, was appointed minister to Venezuela by President McKinley and was appointed by President Roosevelt minister to Portugal, but before starting for Lisbon he was switched to the position of first assistant secretary of state.

CHINA TO SEND STUDENTS.

Two Thousand Youths to Come to America to Be Educated.

[Correspondence of the Associated Press.]

PEKIN, Sunday, Nov. 1. Plans and regulations have been drawn up by the Chinese government for sending some 2,000 Chinese students to America in accordance with an agreement negotiated by Minister Rockhill this summer. This agreement provides for sending 100 students annually for four years and 50 annually for the remainder of the term of the Boxer indemnity, to American schools and colleges. According to the regulations, 80 per cent of these students are to study natural arts and 20 per cent law and government. The plan provides for a Chinese educational commission, with five assistants in the United States, who may or may not live in Washington. The matter is to be in charge connected with the Chinese legation in Washington. There is to be a commission in Pekin which will designate the schools to which students are to be sent. The ages of the students to be sent will vary from 12 to 20 years.

EQUAL TO ANY AFLOAT.

Admiral Mason Talks of 12-Inch Guns Completed or Being Made.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—In his annual report, made public today, Rear Admiral Mason, chief of the bureau of ordnance, declares that the 12-inch guns mounted on the eight latest of our battleships already in commission are equal or superior in power to any 12-inch gun yet afloat anywhere in the world, and the 12-inch guns of our battleships in course of construction will be equal or superior in power to any 12-inch foreign gun of which we have authentic information. Anticipating the possible need of a more powerful gun than any now in use, Admiral Mason favors the partial remodeling of the naval gun shop factory at the Washington navy yard, in order to construct an immense 14-inch gun, designed to fire a 1,400-pound projectile.

The manufacture and preservation of ammunition remains a great problem for the bureau of ordnance, Admiral Mason explains. In this connection the statements concerning the attitude of the Dupont Powder Company's now being prosecuted by another branch of the government under the anti-trust laws proved a feature of the report. "The capacities of the government plants are probably now such that during the continuance of peace the government may be considered nearly independent of the Dupont Powder Company, and there is no danger of its having to purchase at exorbitant prices," says Admiral Mason.

ROYAL TOY COLLECTION.

King Edward's Display at Buckingham Palace Made by Royal Hands.

[illegible] toy exhibition in Europe [illegible] revelation that King Edward [illegible] organized in Buckingham [illegible] on display which has [illegible] certainly that every article [illegible] by royal [illegible] collection is in the king's [illegible] workroom, and a gear [illegible] veteran rocking-horse, [illegible] his father, the Prince [illegible] for him when he was [illegible] and its mane and tail [illegible] and its glass eyes [illegible] polished and [illegible] That the king [illegible] great affection. That [illegible] very different [illegible] may be inferred [illegible] that the king's initials, [illegible] Edwards, are still to be [illegible] the rockers, where it [illegible] his first penknife [illegible] toy, though it has [illegible] of the first English [illegible] The famous [illegible] is a practical working [illegible] is reported that [illegible] years the king [illegible] often to the [illegible] a veteran sailor. [illegible] carried a good [illegible] considerable distance [illegible] the park was quite [illegible] practical.

[illegible] toy is a model [illegible] feet in name of [illegible] sailor king, who presided over the throne. It is [illegible] toy, but it is a remarkably neat and perfect specimen of amateur workmanship. The king's brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, first of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the present Prince of Wales, both destined for the navy, are said to have used it as a plaything in their boyhood days.

A very interesting exhibit is the favorite doll of Queen Alexandra, contributed by her father, the late King of Denmark, when he heard the collection was being prepared. It is a very staid and matronly doll, dressed in quite middle-aged style but very richly, in white silks and brocades. The legend is that the queen cut off every garment herself and sewed every stitch in them.

There is a fire engine built by the Prince of Wales and a flagstaff made by the Duke of Connaught, as well as the tools which he used, also a wooden mast by the late Duke of Edinburgh. The most modern article is a lately [illegible] Dragon Kite, the masterwork of Prince Henry of Wales, the King's grandson, who is now eight and a half years old.

Altogether there are about 500 articles, representing the English royal family history for some 12 or 14 years. A few, and only a few, are of costly material and workmanship. Among these is a silver model of the great Paris exhibition, presented by the Empress Frederick of Germany to her daughter, the Princess Victoria, on her tenth birthday, July 6, 1878. This is valued at several thousand dollars. Another costly gift is a complete equipment of a sailor's [illegible] vessel, presented by the present Kaiserin to Prince Edward of Wales, the king's eldest grandson and heir to the English throne.

Is there anything in the history of Newport's election to indicate that the old discredited machine has been adjusted successfully to the plans and specifications of the new municipal system?—[Providence Journal.

INCREASE ASKED.

Navy Department Needs $10,000,000 More Than Estimated for Next Year's Expenses

Nearly $10,000,000 more is asked by the Navy Department for its expenses next year than was required when estimates were prepared for the use of Congress one year ago. The estimates for the coming fiscal year, just sent to Congress to be used in the preparation of the appropriation bill, aggregate approximately $134,000,000. Those for last year were $123,041,595.59. Two years ago the estimates were $121,595,[illegible]

While these figures are large, they represent a decided cut in the preliminary estimates prepared by the chiefs of bureaus. Each this year and last Departments were ruthlessly pared before the totals were submitted to Congress where of the practice of previous years is followed. They will undergo a further reduction. The navy appropriation by the last session of Congress was $[illegible] under the head of naval establishment and $7,[illegible] under public works, a total of $12,652,000.

Although there has been a general increase in expense of maintenance all along the line due to the development of the navy, there have been particularly heavy increases because of the expense due to the cruise of the battleship fleet around the world and the increase of pay, for which legislation was enacted last year and additions made by Congress to the estimates which had then been submitted. Pay of the navy for last year represented $28,388,201. This was an increase of $7,663,000 over the previous year.

REPUBLICANS DID NOT VOTE.

Citizens' Association Candidates Elected in Middletown.

Resolutions Favoring Amendment of Ballot Law and Regulation of Automobiles.

The special town election in Middletown Friday resulted in a practically unopposed return of Abram A. Brown to the state senate and Frank T. Peckham to the house of representatives. The Republicans had no nominations and generally did not go to the polls only one vote being cast for Charles H. Ward, the Republican candidate for senator at the November election, and two for Joel Peckham, the Republican candidate a month ago. The Citizens' Association generally supported their nominees, Mr. Brown receiving 134 votes, against 145 in November, and Mr. Peckham 132, against 139 in November. Messrs. Brown and Peckham now have a clear title to another year in the positions they now occupy in the General Assembly. The town council's count of the votes is as follows:

For senator, Abram A. Brown, Citizens', 134; Charles H. Ward 1.

For Representative—Frank T. Peckham, Citizens', 132; Joel Peckham, 2.

There was one defective and one blank ballot cast.

The town meeting adopted the following resolution, asking for a change in the election laws that will prevent a recurrence of the mix-up which made necessary the special election:

"Whereas, the miscarriage of the recent election of senator and representative to the General Assembly in this town through an error in the printing of the official ballots provided for said election has conclusively demonstrated the need of great care and better supervision in the preparation of official ballots. Therefore:

"Voted and resolved that the senator and representative to the General Assembly from this town be and they are hereby instructed and directed to use their best endeavors to secure such amendment to chapter 11 of the general laws of this state and of the several acts passed in amendment thereof and addition thereto in relation to voting by secret ballot as will provide for the proper official inspection of said ballot before being sealed up in packages in order to insure the correct printing thereof; also to vote for such amendment of section 50 of said chapter 11 as will remove the ambiguity now existing therein."

A resolution was also adopted, asking for amendments to the automobile law to make it more effective. The resolution is as follows:

"Whereas the law in relation to the use on the public highways of this state of automobiles and motor vehicles in general passed at the last January session of the General Assembly A. D. 1908 has proved abortive and ineffectual in safeguarding and protecting the citizens of this state in their travel on and use of said highways, therefore:

Voted and resolved that the senator and representative to the General Assembly from the town be and they are hereby instructed and directed to urge and advocate the passage of such amendment to said law or addition thereto as will more effectually restrain and punish the reckless and dangerous driving and speeding of automobiles and other motor vehicles in the highways of this state to the peril of the lives of the citizens thereof and in contravention of their guaranteed rights, privileges and immunities under the constitution."

A DIAMOND JUBILEE.

Grand Duke Francis Joseph Celebrates 60th Anniversary of His Accession.

[Marquise de Fontenoy.]

Just 50 years ago Grand Duke Francis Joseph of Austria was, at the age of 18, proclaimed Emperor of Austria in the gloomy old stronghold of Olmutz. Emperor Ferdinand, distressed beyond measure by the scenes of rebellion and of bloodshed during the previous months—he himself and his court had been driven to flight from Vienna by the insurgents, who had massacred several of his ministers under the most atrocious circumstances. All Hungary and his Italian provinces being in a state of rebellion—and finding himself confronted by demands for popular rights, which he did not feel it within his power to concede, determined to abandon the reins of government to other hands. He himself was childless. His brother and next heir, Archduke Francis Charles, was as hostile as himself to parliamentary methods of government, and declared that he, too, could not dream of reigning under the new conditions rendered imperative by the spirit of the times. So he waived his own rights in favor of his eldest son, Francis Joseph. After all the members of the imperial family and the great dignitaries of the realm had been assembled in the throne room of the castle of Olmutz, Emperor Ferdinand read the following declaration:

"For very weighty reasons, we have irrevocably decided to lay down the imperial crown in favor of our beloved nephew, the Most Serene Archduke Francis Joseph, whom we hereby declare to be of age our beloved brother, the Most Serene Archduke Francis Charles, father of our above mentioned most serene nephew, having irrevocably renounced his right of succession to the throne which belongs to him by right, according to the fundamental laws of our family and of the state, in favor of his above mentioned son Francis Joseph."

As soon as he had pronounced the last words the Chancellor of the Empire, Prince Schwartzenberg, arose and read in tones that sound clear and sharp upon the strained silence, three official documents—the declaration that Francis Joseph was Emperor, his father's formal renunciation of his right of succession and Emperor Ferdinand's formal abdication. After the reading had ended these papers were presented to the Emperor and to Archduke Francis Charles for their signatures, and each signed them with his own. Young Francis Joseph sank on his knees before his uncle and kissed the old man's withered hand. Ferdinand raised him and embraced him in a very fatherly and affectionate fashion, and a few minutes later the heralds issued forth on their way to proclaim in the city of Olmutz and throughout the empire the archduke's accession to the throne and his majesty's abdication.

An hour afterward the ex-Emperor and Empress left for Prague, where they were to spend the remainder of their days in peace and quiet, free from all care and worry, the young monarch escorting them on horseback to the gates of Olmutz. And then he returned to the citadel to hold a levee at which his relatives and the great officers of the state tendered him their allegiance and their homage. That is how he began his reign on that second day of December in 1848, the anniversary of which at the age of 78, he celebrated recently.

PORTSMOUTH.

Annual Election of Officers of the Grange—Funeral of George S. Sherman.

[Regular correspondence to the News.]

At this week's meeting of Portsmouth Grange the following officers were elected for the coming year.

Master—Walter A. Sowle.
Overseer—Isaac L. Fish, Jr.
Lecturer—Miss Edna M. Brophy.
Steward—Ernest R. Fish.
Assistant Steward—Jesse J. Durfee.
Chaplain—G. Alvin Simmons.
Treasurer—Joshua Coggeshall.
Secretary—Miss Phoebe A. Coggeshall.
Gate Keeper—Herbert Chase.
Ceres—Mrs. Walter A. Sowle.
Pomona—Miss Lizzie Chase.
Flora—Miss Alice W. Anthony.
Lady Assistant Steward—Miss Gertrude A. Coggeshall.
Executive Committee for three years—E. R. Anthony.

Chowder, cake and coffee were served in the dining room.

The funeral of George S. Sherman took place from the Friends' Meeting house Friday afternoon, a large congregation being present. The services were conducted by Rev. Samuel Hodgson, pastor of the church, who offered prayer and made a brief address. Mr. John S. Kinsler also offered prayer and Mrs. Hodges spoke briefly. There were numerous floral tributes. The bearers were Albert W. Lawrence, Alfred H. Border, Alonzo E. Borden and Frederick W. Holman. The burial was in the Friends' ground. Among others present from out of town were Mrs. Sherman's mother, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sisson of Webster; her two sisters, Mrs. Pond of Natick, Mass., and Mrs. Clapp of Webster; Mr. and Mrs. William Tuttle of New Hampshire and Mr. C. William Sherman of Providence.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies of Newport, Tiverton, Fall River and Swansea will meet next week, afternoon and evening, with the Portsmouth society in the Friends' meeting house. Supper will be served in the small room. In the evening it is expected that Mr. John S. Kinsler will give a talk.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Almy of Bristol have been visiting Mrs. Almy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Grinnell.

A guild house is greatly desired by those attending St. Mary's Church. For many years they used one of the rooms in the rectory. That not now being available, and the society being too large for private houses to conveniently entertain, energetic work is to be done to hasten its possibility.

Mr. Isaac Gray and family are moving into the late David Albro's house on Mitchell's lane. Antone Martins is to move into the home vacated by the Grays, having purchased the farm known as the Freeborn Albro place.

Mr. Reginald Norman has had lights put up along the drive leading to his Black Point estate. As the path is a winding one, the effect is pretty.

Mr. John T. Ellrich of Wauwatosa, Wis., has been in town, looking about with an intention of setting here.

Mrs. Alphonso Davol, who has been sick with tonsilitis, is better.

A YEAR AT PANAMA.

[New York Tribune.]

The report of the Secretary of War concerning the progress of work on the Panama canal is highly gratifying, although it is not as good as a report of later date would be. It covers the year ended June 30 last, and tells us that in that year excavation amounted to 12,054,138 cubic yards. That was a fine achievement, but the excavation for the year which ended November 30 last was much greater, and the record for the year ending with next June will doubtless be much greater still. Efficiency in 1907 was great, but not nearly as great as in 1908. It is reasonable to expect that there will be a steady increase of efficiency, and therefore of rate of progress, during the remainder of the work.

It is also gratifying to observe that work has been pushed on all parts of the canal and that anywhere any serious or unforeseen difficulties have been encountered. The cutting of the great gap at Culebra continues. Much has been done in dredging under the Gatun lake near Colon. Diversion channels for rivers have been constructed, and a substantial beginning has been made on the great dam and flights of locks at Gatun. At these and all other points the work has proceeded smoothly and expeditiously, according to schedule, and there seems to be confident expectation that it will be completed in time to the last. The only point concerning which the general public feels any uncertainty is Gatun. There, and there alone, is the one untried and novel feature of the whole work undertaken. There is no concealing the fact that many engineers of high standing still regard that colossal experiment with misgiving, if not with positive disapproval. On the other hand, many of equal authority, including those whose professional reputations are directly and completely involved in its success, express entire confidence in its practicability.

The fact is that each year of the American enterprise at Panama has been better than the preceding year in efficiency, economy and promise of ultimate and speedy success. If we were working for a second level canal in Culebra cut would be the crux, and the rate of progress in that would determine the time required for completion of the canal. Under the present plans the Gatun dam and locks are the crux, and it is the more difficult to calculate to certainty the time required to finish them. In the absence of unforeseen difficulties of character beyond a reasonable allowance for contingencies the work will be a year or two after the general excavation is done and thus save the canal opened to commerce long before the end of the second decade of this century. Any other result than this would place upon the Gatun plan the burden of blame for otherwise unnecessary delay.

CRUISRE YANKEE SUNK.

Floated After Her Long Stay on Spindle Rock.

On Her Way to New Bedford Struck by a Tug, and Soon Settled.

Freed Friday afternoon from Spindle rock at the entrance to Buzzard's bay, where she had been impaled for ten weeks, cruiser Yankee sank early today near what is known as the Sand spit, a short distance to the north of Penikese island, and only a short distance from the ledge on which the warship had rested since September 23 last. She was floated by the compressed air wrecking methods, financed by John Arbuckle of New York, immediately after being pulled off the rocks. The cruiser was taken in tow, bound for New Bedford. On account of the stiff southwesterly gale prevailing she was anchored at dusk last evening under the lee of Penikese Island, near Cuttyhunk, to await the abating of the storm.

The sinking of the cruiser occurred at 4 o'clock this morning, almost exactly 12 hours after she had been floated from the ledge. The cause of the accident, the culmination of a series of misfortunes which have befallen the Yankee, was an unusually heavy sea kicked up by a high northwest gale. The Yankee, towed by tugs John Harlan and Powhattan, and convoyed by naval collier Lebanon, was proceeding from Spindle rock to New Bedford. The progress of the fleet was slow, and the high wind and heavy seas caused the lawyers to part ten times.

While attempting to get a towing line to the Yankee, tug John Harlan was lifted on a wave and slammed against the side of the cruiser. The impact smashed in a port in the compartment where three air compressors were at work. Water began to pour in through the open port, and in a short time the compressors were rendered useless. With the disabling of these great air pumps, which were more than holding their own against the march of the water previous to the accident, the compartment rapidly filled, and then the water rose higher, giving the cruiser a heavy list to starboard.

It was about 9 o'clock last night when the tug was thrown against the cruiser. So rapidly did the water pour into the Yankee after the accident that Captain James T. McAllister, who was in charge of the marine end of the wrecking work, requested William Wickes Wetherson, the engineer in charge of the work, to order the members of the wrecking crew to leave the ship. Of the 22 men in the crew, all but six were promptly ordered on board tug Powhattan. The Yankee was then straightened as well as the wreckers could straighten her, and an attempt was made to tow her to Penikese Island, where it was proposed to beach her.

About 4 o'clock, and a little while before the cruiser could be towed to the beach, she filled suddenly and sank in 12 feet of water, on what is known as the Sand spit. Commander Charles C. Marsh of the Yankee, Captain McAllister, Engineer Wetherspoon, and the six members of the wrecking crew who were on board the cruiser, took to the rigging and had to be taken off board the Powhattan. All the men escaped with only what they wore. Many of them lost several weeks pay, in addition to their personal effects.

The wrecking crew, Commander Marsh, Captain McAllister and Engineer Wetherspoon were taken to New Bedford today by the Dunbar in tow of John Harlan. The officers planned to return to the scene of the wreck later in the day, taking a crew with them. Collier Lebanon remained by the Yankee.

It is believed that the cruiser can be recovered easily. She was reported as having gone down in a sheltered position, and resting on an even keel on a sandy bottom. Her forward deck, masts and the top of her funnel were above the surface at the water.

The John Harlan, which had been freed from her impact against the Yankee, the rubber and stanchions along the pilot house being carried away, while the commander of the tug, Captain Chase, had a narrow escape from serious injury.

After the Yankee had been freed from Spindle rock yesterday it was the intention of Commander Marsh to the wreckers to have her towed to this port. The wind and weather conditions were unfavorable, however, and the bow of the cruiser was headed towards New Bedford. The sea was high and it was felt thereby that the best thing to do would be to anchor under the lee of Penikese island, the Massachusetts leper colony, situated at the western end of Buzzard's bay, a little north of Cuttyhunk. The sea condition, however, did not favor this procedure, and it was finally decided to try and make New Bedford. The parting of ten hawsers and the collision between the Yankee and the tug finally made it impractical that the cruiser be beached on Penikese.

LAKE SHORE TRAFFIC BLOCKED.

Cables of Derrick Snap and Locomotive Falls Across Two Tracks.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 5.—Traffic on the Lake Shore road was completely blocked for the greater part of last night by a peculiar accident near Toledo. A big freight engine was derailed. A wrecking train with derricks was sent to the scene of the accident. When it arrived. As the big locomotive was hoisted into the air preparatory to being replaced on the track the cables snapped and with a deafening crash the engine fell across both tracks in such a manner as to block traffic both eastbound and westbound for hours. The eastbound Twentieth Century Limited was delayed six hours. Other limited trains were detained from one to four hours.

BOWDOIN MILL NOT CLOSED.

Dificult to Obtain Pulp, but Still Running with Full Force.

TOPSHAM, Me., Dec. 5.—Superintendent F. C. Whitehouse of the Bowdoin Paper Company stated today that the report that his mill has been closed is an error. He said that, while the mill has been bothered the past three or four weeks in obtaining a sufficient supply of pulp because of the drought, it is still running with a full force, but with a smaller production. The mill may be shut down later if conditions do not improve.

EXPERTS TO EXAMINE SMELTERS

Roosevelt May Order Injunction Proceedings Against Anaconda.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—After a hearing at the White House today at which the representatives of the Anaconda Copper Company presented their side of the controversy over the destruction of the forests and vegitation at Anaconda, against which the farmers had complained to him, President Roosevelt declared his intention of sending an expert to Bucktown, Tenn., to investigate several smelters located there, on which it is claimed appliances have been placed which extract the sulphur and arsenic from the fumes at a profit. If the investigation proves the practicability of the appliances the President will order the Department of Justice to proceed with an injunction suit against the copper company.

MUST ACCEPT NO BUSINESS.

Impairment of $150,000 in Metropolitan Surety Company.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—State Superintendent of Insurance Kelsey was in this city today to look into the states of the affairs of the Metropolitan Surety Company, in whose capital and surplus a deputy of the department reported an impairment of $150,000. The company has been ordered by the department to accept no further new business. Mr. Kelsey said the company has 30 days in which to put its affairs on a solid basis.

The business of the company was chiefly the bonding of contracts, private and governmental, bonding state and municipal deposits, and issuing insurance against losses by burglary. It did business of $1,000,000 a year.

EXPLOSION HEARD MILES AWAY.

Corning Mill at Maynard, Mass., Blows Up, Killing Two Men.

MAYNARD, Mass., Dec. 5.—The corning mill of the American Powder Company's plant in this town blew up just before 12:30 p. m. today, and two men were killed. The building was demolished and the financial damage is estimated at $10,000. The dead are: Thomas Cary and Thomas Waterhouse. The men were employes of the powder company, and were the only ones at work in the building at the time of the explosion. Cary leaves a widow and several children. Waterhouse had a wife, but no children.

Nothing could be discovered after the accident to indicate the cause. No other part of the plant was damaged, the building being widely separated, for the sake of safety. The corning mill is the most important and expensive of any of the buildings. It is the place where the powder, after it has been pressed, is picked apart before being sent to the dry house in the final stages of its preparation for the market.

The explosion was heard several miles.

COUNSEL NEEDS MORE TIME.

Morse-Whitney & Kitchen Bankruptcy Case Adjourned to December 10.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The examination in the Whitney & Kitchen bankruptcy case of Charles W. Morse, who is in the Tombs prison pending the appeal from his conviction on charges of violating federal banking laws, was adjourned today until December 10, to give Morse's counsel more time to examine the papers. Morse is charged with owing $22,000 to the failed brokerage firm on marginal account.

PROMETHEUS LAUNCHED.

Big Steel Collier Takes the Water from Mare Island Yard.

VALLEJO, Cal., Dec. 5.—Mare Island navy yard, across the straits from this city, was in holiday dress today, in honor of the launching of the great steel collier Prometheus, which is destined to carry fuel to the fighting ships of Uncle Sam's navy. The docks and yards were thronged with interested visitors, and about the ways where the big ship lay they swarmed. A closely packed throng as the vessel glided stern first into the calm waters of the channel, dinging a plume of white spray out from under the overhang of her high decks as she took the plunge. It was a stirring spectacle, and the onlookers answered the thrill of it with a hearty American cheer as the flag-decked ocean carrier lifted majestically to the resistance of the water and swung slowly round in the grip of the flooding tide.

The Prometheus is the largest steel ship ever built on the coast and the throngs which came to the launching from the bay counties testified to the importance of the occasion in the eyes of the people of the coast. Under the direction of Naval Constructor N. A. Evans, the building of the collier has been completed in remarkable time, as the keel was laid in October, 1907, and Constructor Evans asserts that he can have her ready to join the fleet by January 1, 1909, if necessary. Everything possible will be done toward completing the Prometheus before she leaves the yard, and it will be months before she leaves the yard, and it will be months to install the machinery and she will be ready for her trial trip.

The ship has a displacement of 12,000 tons, and, based on a deadweight of 9,000 tons, she will be able to carry 7,000 tons of fuel, a very important item.

ONLY EXERCISE CRUISE.

Holland Does Not Call Procession of Warships.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 5.—The government of The Netherlands has declined to dignify the procession of the three Dutch warships—battleship Jacob Van Heemskerland and cruisers Gelderland and Friesland—along the coast of Venezuela from Puerto Cabello to La Guayra as a naval demonstration. It asserts that this manoeuvre was only an ordinary exercise cruise. Officials today pointed out that anything in the nature of a blockade must be duly notified to the powers before being undertaken. They said that no such notification has yet been sent, nor has the necessary notice been given to parliament of any proposed warlike action.

The government has received no official advices concerning the statement that four American warships are expected at Curacao the beginning of January, but it is thought here that now the Presidential election is over the United States possibly may lend Holland more effective assistance than the moral support already promised.

WEALTH LARGELY IMAGINARY.

Philadelphia Woman's Missing Valuables May Not Have Been Stolen.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—The police of this city who have been notified that jewelry, valuable furs and art treasures variously estimated as worth from $50,000 to $75,000, had disappeared from the home of Mrs. George Wood since her death, October 13, declared today that if the many articles alleged to be missing were taken from the house they were not carried off by professional thieves.

The dead woman was 60 years old, and was the widow of George Wood, former American manager of a foreign insurance company. Her handsome home on North Broad street contained art treasures gathered here and abroad. No one was in the house when she died. A will left by her appointed the Girard Trust Company and two women friends as executors of the estate, and when it came to distributing to the beneficiaries many articles mentioned in the will it was found they were missing. It is not alleged that the articles were stolen, and there is no positive evidence that the things had not been disposed of during the lifetime of the woman. It was a peculiarity of Mrs. Wood that her things were kept in general confusion. Since her death valuable ornaments have been found hidden in the trunks, tucked behind furniture and poked in out-of-the-way corners. The police declare that Mrs. Wood's wealth was largely imaginary and that she was in debt when she died.

TO COST $30,000,000.

New Haven Road Places Contract for New York Improvements.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The Evening World today says the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company has placed a contract calling for the expenditure of $30,000,000 in and around this city. These improvements, the story says, include electrification of a six-track line from New Rochelle to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, a tunnel under the East river to Astoria and thence to a huge passenger station to be erected on the block bounded by Fourth and Lexington avenues, Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets. It says the contract has been let to the New York firm known as the Bradly-Gaffney-Steers Company, the successor to the company in which Charels F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, was one of the controlling forces.

SUBMITTED TO HUGHES.

Plans for Lake Champlain Centenary Practically Complete.

ALBANY, Dec. 5.—Plans for the Lake Champlain tercentenary celebration in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain, in July next, were practically completed at a meeting here today of representatives of New York, Vermont and Canada, and were submitted to Governor Hughes. Governor Hughes later entertained at luncheon at the executive mansion several of the commissioners, including Governor George H. Prouty of Vermont, chairman of the Vermont commission; Senator W. J. Van Patten, former mayor of Burlington, Vt.; Rev. Dr. John M. Thomas, president of Middlebury, Vt., College; former Senator Horace W. Bailey of Vermont, and L. O. Armstrong of Montreal, a member of the Conservative party of the Canadian parliament.

THE IMMIGRATION PROBLEM.

Rev. Charles Stelzle Speaks Before Council of Churches of Christ.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. —After holding two business sesions a day, with four great popular meetings each night, since the convention first met, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which is organized to bring Protestant churches into comon action in spreading the gospel, decided to hold but one session today.

Among the matters considered was the organization of local federations and the immigration problem. These came before the council in the form of reports from committees. The report on local federations contained suggestions for the organization of local organizations. In this connection the committee presented resolutions, which were adopted, expressing the conviction of the federal council that, in view of conditions which exist in cities, small towns and rural communities, the time has come when churches should join their forces in federated efforts, and that the aim should be to make a local federation a means through which the evangelistic need and moral welfare of the community will be cared for most effectively.

A resolution presented by the committee on the church and the immigrant was adopted. Among those who took part in the discussion of the immigrant problem was Rev. Charles Stelzle of New York, secretary of church and labor of the Presbyterian Church. He asserted that the Protestants are deserting the down-town districts of New York city, and that socialism is coming in. Mr. Stelzle said: "And it is not the kind of socialism you men call Christian socialism, but it is the worst kind of revolutionary socialism."

Rev. William H. Roberts, chairman of the business committee of the council, made a report recommending that no action be taken toward the incorporation of the federal council.

The committee on religious instruction through the Sunday School also made its report at today's session. The committee recommended the consideration of a plan whereby there shall be put into convenient form, for the use in every home within the constituency of all our churches, a group of Bible texts, numbering perhaps 150 to 250, embracing the choicest selections from the Old and the New Testaments, in order that it shall be easy for the home to teach these selected verses to the members of the family at such an age as memory will convert and retain this Scripture during an entire lifetime. The recommendation was adopted.

HAZING AN EPIDEMIC.

Parents and Public Officials to Blame That It Is Not Eradicated.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—An appeal to colleges from parents, public officials and the press to unite in an effort to stop hazing has been issued by President Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois. He describes hazing as a sort of annual epidemic. "It breaks out at the beginning of the year," the appeal reads, "and rages for a time like a fever. It is difficult to eradicate, owing to the sentiment of parents and public officials, who, while condemning the thing in the abstract, in a solid sort of way, practically support it by refusing to regard it as anything more than a bit of harmless horseplay."

THE TAMPA MISSING?

Wreckage in Lake Superior May Be That of Coal Steamer.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 5.—Rumors are current here and at Sault Ste. Marie in connection with the finding of considerable wreckage off Crisp point, Lake Superior, yesterday, that steamer Tampa of Detroit, bound from Cleveland to Fort Williams, Ontario, with a load of coal is missing. The Tampa passed up the Soo Sunday night, and Henry Fineran, Jr., of this city, her owner, said late last night that she had not reached Fort William.

The Tampa is a wooden vessel 300 feet long, and with a carrying capacity of 3,000 to 4,000 tons. Her captain is D. G. Gordon of Detroit, and her crew consists of about ten or a dozen men.

OIL BARGE AND CREW LOST.

No. 101 Foundered Off Seal Island While on Way to Halifax.

SHELBURNE, Nova Scotia, Dec. 5.—The loss of oil barge No. 101 and the seven members of her crew was reported here today by tug John Hughes. The Hughes reported that while proceeding in tow from Boston for Halifax the barge foundered off Seal Island, Thursday.

NEW IMPLEMENTS OF WAR.

Ordnance Board Provides for Aeroplanes and Wireless Telephones.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—In reviewing its work for the year, the board of ordnance and fortifications of the War Department enumerates in its annual report to the Secretary of War, made public today, a number of interesting experiments with implements of war.

The board calls attention to the interest it manifested as early as 1898 in heavier-than-air flying machines by furnishing money to the late Dr. S. P. Langley to make experiments in aerodynamics. It reviews the successful flights at Fort Myer of the Wright brothers' aeroplane last summer, adding that the board has made provision from its own funds for the purchase of the machine.

One of the inventions approved during the year was a wireless telephone, over which satisfactory conversations were held at a distance of five miles. Some of these instruments were purchased.

THE STATE TUBERCULOSIS EXHIBIT.

To the Editor of the News:

Last evening I had the opportunity to once more feel proud that I was a Rhode Islander, when I saw the fine exhibit of my native state at the tuberculosis exhibit, now being held at the American Museum of Natural History, Columbus avenue and Seventy-seventh street. Three good-sized booths were occupied by us and the pictures of Wallum Lake which I had previously not heard of, and the institutions around Providence, where the unfortunates are cared for, were of much interest to many. One exhibit of a room showing the unsanitary conditions, where there was no ventilation, without light, cooking and sleeping quarters in a crowded space, seemed impossible in these enlightened days. Adjoining this exhibit was shown the room after being visited by the officers of the Rhode Island society, the absence of any dirt, and the place generally improved in every way.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5. Wall Street—The stock market opened irregular, with Amalgamated Copper at 85, American Smelting 92¾, American Locomotive 56¾, Anaconda 50¾, Atchison 95½, Brooklyn Transit 56¾, Canadian Pacific 177¾, Chesapeake & Ohio 53¾, Erie 34¾, Great Northern preferred 144¾, Missouri Pacific 65¾, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 33, Consolidated Gas 142½, New York Central 117⅞, Northern Pacific 143¾, Pennsylvania 129¾, Reading 138⅝, Rock Island 24¾, St. Paul 151, Southern Pacific 118¼, Union Pacific 181½, United States Steel 55¾, United States Steel preferred 132 and Wabash preferred 45½.

10—The stock market opened active and irregular within a narrow range, the low-priced stocks retaining their conspicuous positions. Kansas City Southern rose 4¾, Chesapeake & Ohio and Colorado Fuel 1, and St. Louis Southwestern preferred ⅞. Wabash preferred declined ¾ on selling to take profits.

11—A further upward rush in the low-priced stocks aroused some misgivings at the violence of the recent advance in these stocks, and free offerings were made of the high-priced stocks, which resulted in material declines in them. The advance carried up the Gould group from 1 to 1½, Kansas City Southern preferred 2, and Colorado Fuel 2½, practically all of which was lost when the market broke. The tone was firmer at 11 o'clock, with Reading a point above last night.

Closing—Prime mercantile paper 3¾ to 4½ per cent; sterling exchange steady, at $4.84.25 @ $4.84.35 for 60 days, and at $4.86.45 @ $4.86.50 for demand; commercial bills $4.83¾ @ $4.84; bar silver, 48⅝; Mexican dollars, 45; government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular; money on call, nominal; no loans; time loans, dull but steady; 60 days 3 per cent, 90 days 3 @ 3¼ per cent, six months 3½ @ 3¾ per cent. The market closed weak and disorderly. Reading was rushed up 2¼; the second preferred made an upward bound of 11 points and the first preferred of 4¾. A rumor that the second preferred was to be exchanged half for the first preferred and half for common stock and the dividend raised was responsible. Enormous selling orders were put in for other stocks, to take advantage of the effect of the Reading movement, and prices broke with violence. There was some heavy covering by shorts, but stocks continued to be offered.

THE POSDICK-YOAKUM ENGAGEMENT.

The engagement is announced of Miss Katherine Yoakum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Yoakum, to Mr. Paulding Posdick. Miss Yoakum is a favorite in society in New York and in this city and on Long Island, where her father, who is prominent in railroad life, has an estate near Westbury. She was introduced to society two years ago, has spent two seasons in Newport and was in Europe last summer with her family. Two summers ago the Yoakums occupied the Thom villa on Narragansett avenue.

Mr. Posdick is a son of Mrs. Charles A. Child by a former marriage and was graduated from Harvard in 1905. He is a grandson of the late Bainbridge S. Clarke and has been identified with the summer life here, where his mother has had a villa for many seasons. The date for the wedding has not been set. Mr. and Mrs. Yoakum will give a dinner for their daughters on Tuesday at their home in New York.

CRUISER YANKEE SUNK.

the Yankee was equipped with wrecking pumps, operated by the cruiser's own power. When the vessel began to fill, the fires under the boilers were extinguished, thus putting out of commission the wrecking pumps. With both the compressors and wrecking pumps disabled, the water gained rapidly, and the cruiser filled and sank before she could be towed to Penikese beach.

The spot where the Yankee sank is about three miles to the eastward of Hen and Chickens ledge, 12 miles from New Bedford, and a little to the north of Penikese Island.

Tug John Harlan belongs to the Arbuckle fleet, while the Powhattan is a government craft.

Although no official statement regarding future work can be obtained today, it is understood that the task of refloating the Yankee will be begun as soon as a diver has reported on her condition and position.

The following is a statement given to a reporter by Commander Marsh:

"The Yankee was floated about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, and at once I noticed that she was listing considerably to starboard. We headed for the lee of Penikese Island, where it was the intention to get the ship into shallow water, where a careful inspection of the work was to be made before we proceeded to any great distance.

"After we got under way the vessel listed more and more, and this listing must have become so great as to break in an air port which led into the compressor room. The breaking of this port allowed a flood of water into the room, thus putting the compressor apparatus out of action. This of course meant eventually that the air compartments were flooded, and eventually the water worked into the fireroom and fires were put out.

"It was about 2 o'clock when the fires went out, I should judge, and the compressors furnishing the air to keep the water out of the compartments of course went out of commission with the fires. The spar deck soon went about a foot under water. We called the tugs and everybody went on board the tugs, presumably. Just as the tugs were shoving off Captain McAllister jumped back on the Yankee and called out to the Powhattan to give a hawser, which was done. The ship was then towed for some little distance, until the line parted.

"About this time Captain McAllister found the chief engineer of the wrecking company, Mr. Wotherspoon, and six of his men. As soon as I saw this situation I returned to the Yankee, which in filling had righted herself to nearly an even keel. I had hopes even then of getting the vessel into shallow water. Very suddenly, however, she listed more and the people on board took to the rigging and the ship sank quickly."

Official advices from Commander Marsh advised the Navy Department of the sinking of the vessel. "After floating," he says," the ship had a list to starboard, which increased until a broken berth deck air port flooded the compressor room and fireroom. Ship listed steadily and sank deeper. When the open deck was awash all hands were sent on tugs and we had no casualties. Ship settled quickly in 42 feet of water. Wrecking company will renew operations at once."

A court of inquiry will be appointed to establish the responsibility of Commander Marsh or other officers of the Yankee for the accident.

Commander Marsh, Chief Engineer Wotherspoon of the wreckers, together with the wrecking crew and the crew of the Yankee, left New Bedford at 11:30 this morning to go down to the sunken cruiser. It has been ascertained that she lies three eights of a mile east of Great ledge, about one and three quarters miles east of Dumpling Light, from which point she is plainly visible. This places the Yankee about four miles from New Bedford harbor, and but for the haze the sunken cruiser, with her masts, funnel and rails out of the water, would be visible from high points in New Bedford. The party which returned to the Yankee was accompanied by a diver, who was to make an examination of the cruiser's condition.

The floating of the Yankee is considered another triumph for the compressed air method of wrecking. Engineer Wotherspoon, who is attending to the details of the work for Mr. Arbuckle, took up the work of clearing the vessel from the rocks about a month ago, after the navy with all its men and ships had worked at the task for two or three weeks. They only succeeded in fastening her to the rocks by the aid of 1,000 barrels of cement, which was put into her with the idea of closing the holes in her hull.

It has been stated during the two months she has been on the rocks that the cruiser has not suffered irreparable injury, and that if she could be floated and taken to a dry dock repairs for active sea duty would be quite a reasonable undertaking. Her hull was badly punctured by the rocks, but it has not been considered that it was critically strained. Her engines and boilers remained in good condition, despite the fact that they have been soaked with sea water several times. The upper parts of the craft have been undamaged until the present time, and ever since the craft went on the rocks a navy crew has stood by her, with Captain Marsh, her commander, on board a larger part of the time. He left the craft only twice, once to come to this city for the opening of the bids for wrecking the vessel, and later going to Boston to see his crew, which was sent to the navy yard there for rest and change. During the latter part of the ship's rest on the rocks, the naval crew has numbered only about half a dozen seamen.

The Yankee, as parent ship of the submarine flotilla, left this harbor at noon Sunday, September 20, accompanied by the Hist and the submarines, two of which were disabled and had to be towed. They were bound for Buzzard's bay for a series of manoeuvres to complete their summer's program, before going to Philadelphia to participate in the big celebration there. On the following Wednesday night, while the ship was in a dense fog and the submarines were working around her, she went on the rocks, thus closing her career for the time at least as parent ship for these under-water boats. Her preparation for the duty consumed nearly as many months as she spent weeks as the parent ship.

When the Yankee went on the rocks it was high tide and the sea was calm. Under the direction of Naval Constructor Washington L. Capps, head of the Washington bureau, wreckers were immediately and efforts were straightway begun to raise the vessel, the professional wreckers and their gear working under navy direction, and the navy dispatching a large fleet of its craft and hundreds of men to the scene to assist. She was lightened of everything movable. Several times the wrecking tugs pulled and strained on the hawsers which had been made fast to the cruiser, but the craft would not budge an inch. About a month ago the Navy Department decided that the Yankee was doomed to leave her bones on the Hen and Chickens.

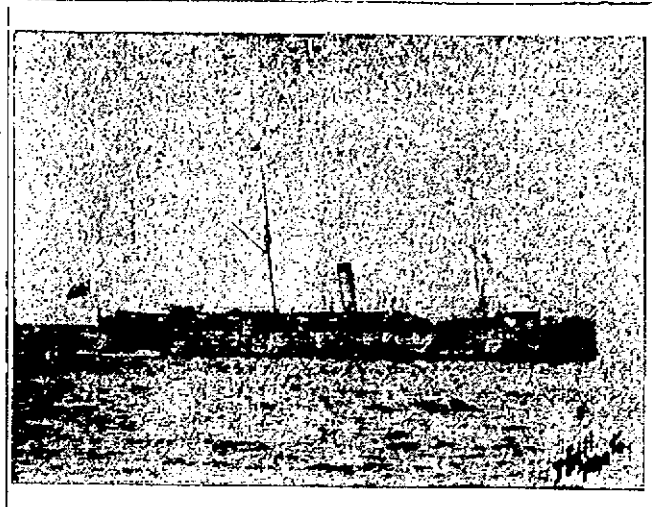
As a last chance bids for wrecking the craft were asked for. At this juncture John Arbuckle of New York, the well known sugar refiner and philanthropist, came forward with a proposition to float the vessel by means of compressed air. This method of wrecking has been tried with signal success on smaller ships, but upon no large vessels. It was agreed that if the work was not crowned with success after the expenditure of $50,000 by Mr. Arbuckle he would be at liberty to withdraw from the contract and the Navy Department would pay him $25,000.

The work of raising the vessel by the trained wreckers occupied a longer time than was at first anticipated, because it was found necessary to remove about 1,000 barrels of cement which had been poured into a compartment of the Yankee in the attempt to fill the gaps in her hull. Instead of filling the holes in the hull the cement glued the Yankee fast to the rocks, it is claimed unofficially.

All this cement had to be dried and blown away before the contractors could start on the real work of making the compressed air experiment. Good weather, however, favored the work, which proceeded steadily, though slowly. Yesterday afternoon at high tide, and favored by the southwesterly gale, the wrecking fleet assembled for their efforts, and the Yankee came clear of the rocks and floated into deep water.

The situation now confronting the wreckers, who are supposed to deliver the vessel to the navy afloat and in condition to be taken to a dry dock, is not believed to be so serious as that which they went against when she was on the rocks. The earliest use of air for the wrecking of vessels was when they were sunk and raising was the necessity. Vessels well below the surface have been raised by different methods in the use of air, and with the craft now lying in comparatively shoal water, since her normal draft was nearly 20 feet and to the top of her deck house was nearly as much more, it is believed that the wreckers will be able to work her into shoaler water by the aid of air and pontoons until she has been raised so far that the compressed air plant will again be able to float her on her own bottom, without outside assistance, as was being done until the seas caused the breaking in of her port. It was hardly to be expected from the first that the craft, coming off the rock, would be ready for the trip to a dry dock, and yesterday it was known that such would not be the case and plans were laid to wait in shoal water somewhere, to catch second wind as it were. Of course considerable patching was contemplated, that she might hold her second wind for a longer period.

With the sinking of the Yankee wireless communication between the Lebanon and the Torpedo Station appears to have been suspended, for reasons not known at this end of the line, though since press reports have reached the Station the wireless there has been making every endeavor to induce the collier's wireless to say something which would give the commandant of the Second Naval District an idea as to what is taking place in the district.



CRUISER YANKEE.

A DRAMA OF SUSPENSE.

"The Thief" comes with the laurels of success imposed by the people of London Paris and New York. Its success everywhere proves that playgoers incline to a drama with serious import and a background of sincere love. When one dissects "The Thief," which contains a story of a robbery, one finds that the characters are all actuated by the spirit of love and that the same influence clears the sky and makes possible a happy ending. Before the fall of the final curtain, the playwright has contrived a series of complications and situations which make the play unforgetable. Perhaps the largest trump in Bornstedt's hand is his ability to create suspense, and one scene leads to another so logically that the audience is virtually held by its throat.

Kyrle Bellew interprets the chief man's role with artistic skill and Katherine Grey, one of the most prominent young actresses on the stage, brings her ripened art to a high degree of excellency as Marise, the wife. In the company are Edward R. Mawson, Isabel Richards, Eugene O'Brien, Sidney Herbert and Edward Elsner.

ST. GEORGE INSTEAD OF THE KNICKERBOCKER FIVE.

The basket ball game scheduled between the Naval Reserves and the Knickerbocker Five of New York was cancelled yesterday afternoon by New Yonkers, who were unable to come here on account of injuries to some of the players received in a practice game Thursday night. The local management has been successful in filling the date by securing the St. George team of New York, which was originally scheduled to play here last Wednesday night, but was unable to do so. St. George will present a strong line-up in the coming contest and there is every prospect that the game will be fast and interesting. "Doc" John" Otkins, the ballet player in the east, will be at centre; Boyer, the former scrappy little forward of the St. Peters team, and Keany, the old Xavier player, will be the forwards, while the back position will be filled by Kearin and Shortmeier.

BOULEVARD NOT NEEDED.

Cost Too Great in View of Other Expenses—Value of the Naval Establishments to the City.

To the Editor of the News:

In the present agitation as to whether Newport is to abandon the proposed boulevard, does it not seem, with the city in its present financial straits, and many of our principal thoroughfares badly in need of repair, almost an absurdity to seriously contemplate the building of a boulevard? Bath road, for example, the principal approach to Easton's beach, is and has been for years greatly in need of paving, while our present boulevard (extension of Kay street) during the spring months is a perfect mud hole, about impassable, not to speak of the dust and general condition during the entire summer.

To build such a boulevard as is proposed would involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, not to speak of the required taxation to maintain and keep such a thoroughfare in repair—with a benefit to whom? Surely not to the taxpayers of Newport, but to the fortunate people who hold the land immediately abutting the roadway.

At the public hearing Thursday evening I note that Judge Robert M. Franklin stated that the Congressional naval committee has the final decision as to the location of the naval hospital. Surely Judge Franklin must have been badly misinformed, as the money for the purchase of land has been appropriated and Secretary Newberry has the power to select the site; otherwise he never would have placed himself on record by making a definite price, accepting the land with clear title, the buildings removed within 60 days.

In the minds of many there seems to have developed the idea that the Navy Department wished the Maitland property for a hospital site with the intention of dumping all forms of contagious and malignant disease there. But such is not the case, and I dare say the Newport Hospital at the present date contains more contagious cases than this naval hospital. It will contain at any one time, for the very reason that the Naval Training Station is equipped with a large modern building for all such contagious cases.

It is generally admitted by all unprejudiced thinking businessmen that the government posts and reservations are Newport's greatest yearly asset, and in order to substantiate this fact let us look at a few of the expenditures of the Navy Department for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1907, and ending June 30, 1908, as follows:

Fresh provisions for Naval Training Station	$171,500.00
Paid officers and men, Naval Training Station	445,505.00
Supplies purchased for Naval Training Station and Torpedo Station	228,138.62
Pay rolls at Torpedo Station for year	400,000.00
Pay of officers and enlisted men, Torpedo Station	56,000.00
Fresh provisions, naval hospital	14,134.00
Labor roll, Bradford	28,130.60
Other expenditures, navy pay office	26,987.62
Total	$1,379,420.86
Fort Adams yearly expenditures aggregate	$500,000.00
U. S. engineer office average last 10 years	$700,000.00

The above expenditures do not include the amount paid for the new torpedo factory or for any new building at the Naval Training Station. With these facts in view does it not seem wise for Newport to exert herself for the furtherance and increase of our government stations, not only in spirit but by adding in legislation for the expenditures of money for a general increase.

MOTHERS' MEETINGS.

Work of Civic League Discussed and Important Questions Selected for Future Talks.

At the mothers' meeting at Coddington School Friday afternoon Mrs. A. P. Squire was in charge in the absence of Mrs. Walter N. Hill. The mothers first voted from a list of subjects on the blackboard for the topics of the next two meetings, "Confidential Talks between Mothers and Children," and "The Special Senses and Their Care" being chosen.

The first mothers' meeting of the year in each of the school buildings is devoted to the work of the Civic League. The first speaker of the afternoon was Miss Harriet E. Thomas, who spoke of the work of the Civic League in general and of the sociological department in particular. The municipal and educational departments were briefly touched upon and then Miss Thomas took up in some detail the four committees of the sociological department—homeschool, housing, social evils and special philanthropic problems.

Miss Kate L. Clarke spoke on the municipal department which aims to help the street department enforce its laws. Four or five women in each ward go over all the streets in their districts once a month or more often and report any violations of the city ordinances to Miss Clarke or to Mrs. Charles Weaver. Complaints are also gladly received by Miss Clarke or Mrs. Weaver, who will present such complaints to the proper municipal authorities.

The last talk of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Edward C. Perkins on the work of the educational department. The work of the Newport League of Good Citizenship among the school children was explained, the importance of teaching the children that laws are made for the good of the community being dwelt upon. At the conclusion of the well attended meeting tea and wafers were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mothers' meetings were also held yesterday afternoon at Coggeshall School in charge of Mrs. Alfred G. Langley and at Carey School in charge of Miss Ruth B. Franklin. At Coggeshall Mrs. Langley spoke on the work of the Civic League and "Patent Medicines" and "Foods for Children" were chosen as the subjects for future meetings. At Carey Miss Franklin spoke on the work of the Civic League in general, dwelling at some length on the municipal department; Mrs. Harry Tyler spoke on the educational department, and Miss Sara E. Coates, on the sociological department. "Patent Medicines" and "Confidential Talks between Mothers and Children" were chosen as topics of future discussion.
